Over 6,000 security personnel were deployed at Jantar Mantar alone

Cops escort farmers from Singhu & back

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

New Delhi: Delhi Police personnel stuck like magnets to the farmers at Jantar Mantar to prevent any law and order situation and the day passed off peacefully. The cops escorted the protesters from Singhu to Jantar Mantar and back to Singhu on Thursday, the first day of the farmers' Kisan Sansad. Around 30,000 police and paramilitary personnel were deployed across the city, with around 6,000 at Jantar Mantar.

Amid the strict security arrangement at Jantar Mantar, media people were allowed in only after a thorough scrutiny of their identity cards. Initially there was confusion as media persons were not allowed to enter the protest site and were confined to an enclosure. But they were later permitted into the barricaded protest site after the farmers intervened and said they wanted the media to be allowed inside. Police said the journalists were stopped as part of the crowd management since a large number of media people wanted to go in at the same time.

A scuffle broke out and a 45-year-old cameraperson of a news channel suffered injuries when a man identified as Prabhjot Singh, 41, who claimed to be working as a freelance journalist entered the media enclosure and began abusing and mocking the members of the national media who were present at the Kisan Sansad site. Singh could actually be seen going close to the spots where reporters from specific news organisations were standing and throwing invectives at them.

A police officer said, "Amid all this, a scuffle took place and Prabhjot Singh allegedly hit the cameraperson with the stick he was using to hold his phone while recording the proceedings. The victim started bleeding and was taken to hospital, having injured his hand. Further action will be taken against the attacker once we receive a complaint from the victim, but so far we haven't received any."
